Women, like Empresses, condemn to imprisonment and hard labor ninetenths of mankind.—Tolstoy.

Marriage is a lottery in which men stake their liberty and women their happiness.—Mme. de Rieux. There are some very pretty women who don't understand the law of the road with regard to handsome faces. Nature and custom agree in conceding to all males the right of at least two distinct looks at every comely female countenance, without any infraction of courtesy or the sentiment of respect.—

Miss Willa Rodgers entertained last night for the Lakota club. The com-pany included Mr. and Mrs. David W. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Burns, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Criswell, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kleinhans, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin O'Neil, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliott, Miss Kate Gunther.Miss Charles Elliott, Miss Kate Guittle. Also Rodgers, Miss Marion Garretson, Miss Bess West, Miss Mary Thompson, Mr. Guy Adams, Mr. John Waters, Mr. John Abrahams, Mr. Ralph Moore.

The personable young man in the average American city has developed into a much pampered individual. If he dances well, makes a pleasing dinner partner and gives a little attention to purple and fine linen, and sends an occasional bouquet of violets to particudances well, makes a pleasing dinner partner and gives a little attention to purple and fine linen, and sends an occasional bouquet of violets to particularly favored women, he is very apt to be placed on a social pedestal, which is good for neither his mentality nor his manners.

So many American men give themselves over entirely to the pursuit of wealth or fame that the young man who can gracefully keep up the social life and still seeps a moderate busiwealth or fame that the young man who can gracefully keep up the social life and still score a moderate business success is in a fair way to be spoiled by over-appreciative women friends. At first, warmed by the glow of social success, he is extremely careful about paying his obligations. He shows his appreciation of invitations by dancing even with the wall flowers, about whom his hostess is worried. He makes his dinner calls religiously, and is especially careful to be attentive to the out of town guests of such women as have made him welcome in their have made him welcome in their

At the dance he bestows his attentions only upon the belle of the evening, or the newest girl, the out of town guest. If pleasing partners are not plentiful, he lounges in the smoking room when too bored to dance. He is no longer tillous as to the hours for calling. and he is very apt to annoy the husband of some induer lounging in their comfortable living room at most in opportune hours, filling the air with smoke, and his host's choicest Cloisone bowl with ashes. the air with smore, and his hosts choicest Cloisone bowl with ashes. But he has become a fixture in the social world, and somehow manages to retain his foothold. And the saddest part of the situation is that young men, new to the town and its social life, are very apt to accept him as a model of good form, for what they are apt to call "smart manners."
